Tonight's 'Maine' Storylines

The Mariners and Railers open up a crucial three game set that could go a long way in deciding the fourth and final North Division playoff spot. Entering play on Saturday, the two teams are deadlocked at a .511 PT%. The Mariners finished a busy month of February with a record of 6-6-1, and have 13 more games on the slate this month. While 10 of February's 13 contests took place on the road, the Mariners have a more balanced March, with seven home and six away. Despite a loss to Adirondack their last time out one week ago in Glens Falls, the Mariners offense has been hot, scoring a total of 16 goals over last week's three-game road trip. Leading the charge has been Cam Askew, who has seven goals in his last seven games, including a power play tally in each of the last five. Leading scorer Mathew Santos is one point shy of 40 on the year after back-to-back two-assist performances at Adirondack. Santos has a personal four-game point streak surrounding a brief AHL stint with Laval. With starting netminder Jeremy Brodeur recalled to AHL Providence on Friday, the Mariners acquired goaltender Stefanos Lekkas from the Wheeling Nailers in exchange for future considerations. The Mariners are looking to get a road victory in Worcester for the first time this season, dropping their first five trips to DCU Center (0-3-1-1).
